

POLICE HELPLESS IN BURDICK CASE, SAYS CHIEF BULL.

Tells The Evening World Over the Long-Distance Telephone that the Tracks of the Murderer Are Being Carefully Covered.

Thus far there have been half a dozen theories as to the identity of the person who murdered Edward L. Burdick in the "den" in his mansion in Buffalo on Thursday night last. Circumstances as first gave rise to the belief that it was a woman. Then the theory was advanced that it was a jealous man who followed his wife to Burdick's home.

Another idea is that it may have been committed out of revenge for an old insult.

The Evening World called up Superintendent of Police Bull, of Buffalo, on the long-distance telephone this afternoon, and the following conversation resulted:

The Evening World—What is the latest news in the Burdick murder mystery?

Supt. Bull—There are no new developments. The case stands at this hour just as it stood yesterday.

The Evening World—Do you anticipate that arrests will be made to-day?

Supt. Bull—I do not. Unless something unforeseen occurs we are about as far away from an arrest now as we were when we took up the investigation.

The Evening World—A newspaper here reports that ground glass was found in the stomach of the dead man, indicating that his murderer attempted to poison him.

STOMACH NOT YET ANALYZED.

Supt. Bull—Nothing in it. The chemical analysis of the stomach has not been completed and the report of the chemist will not be ready for some time.

The Evening World—Do you agree with the theory that a jealous husband traced his wife to Burdick's house in the night, entered by the rear window, found her in the "den" with him and killed him?

Supt. Bull—I wouldn't like to say what my theory is. There are all sorts of theories. I do not recall a crime in my experience as a policeman that was so well covered up. This is different from the ordinary murder. There are so many complications in the relations of the people mixed up with the Burdicks that clues lead in every direction, and thus far the most of them have run off into the air.

TRACKS CAREFULLY COVERED UP.

The person who committed this murder may have done it in a sudden spasm of rage, but after the murder was committed there were steps taken to cover up the tracks of the murderer. Generally in cases of this kind we have means of getting pretty close to somebody against whom suspicion may be directed with reason, but in the Burdick mystery we have been up against a series of puzzling things.

The Evening World—Is it true that a missing golf stick has been found?

Supt. Bull—I have been getting reports from Chief of Detectives Cusack on all stages of the case and have heard nothing about it.

The Evening World—How about the cocktail bottle top that was found in the rear of the Burdick house?

Supt. Bull—I haven't heard just what significance is attached to the discovery. So far as I know it is not regarded as of much importance.

WOMAN DROPS OUT OF SIGHT.

The Evening World—Has any trace been found of the woman who walked to the middle of the street to avoid a policeman near the Burdick home on the night of the tragedy?

Supt. Bull—Not a trace, although the policeman has looked over a lot of women. We have tried to find her, but when she walked out of his sight she appears to have walked off the face of the earth. If she had nothing to do with the crime and can explain her presence in the neighborhood we think it strange that she does not come out and reveal herself in confidence, thus clearing up one of the many puzzling features of the case.

The Evening World—Is Mrs. Burdick under surveillance?

Supt. Bull—Not exactly, but of course if she left Buffalo we would know where she went.

LAWYER ARRESTED FOR ROW IN COURT.

Jesse Henry, a lawyer, who for years has frequented the Tombs Police Court, was arrested to-day by Sergt. Brown, of the Court squad.

Sergt. Brown met Henry at the gate leading to that part of the court-room where prisoners are arraigned. He asked Henry, who was about to enter the inclosure, if he had a case in court and what his business was. The sergeant told Henry that if he did not have business in the court he could not enter the inclosure.

Henry said that he would enter anyway and declared that he was as much an officer of the court as was the sergeant. At this Sergt. Brown opened the gate, took Henry into the inclosure and arrested him. To the clerk Henry refused to give his address.

Sergt. Brown then arraigned Henry before Magistrate Barlow. He explained how and why he had arrested Henry and added that the prisoner was continually hanging about the court with no apparent business there. Sergt. Brown said that some time ago he found that Henry had taken $1 from a woman in the corridor to procure a warrant for Magistrate Barlow said that Sergt. Brown had done perfectly right in making the arrest. He discharged Henry with a reprimand.

ALFRED FRANK NOW SEEKS A DIVORCE.

The divorce suit brought by Alfred Frank, of the firm of Frank Bros., owning two department stores, against Rose Fleishman Frank, came to trial this afternoon before Justice Scott and a jury in the Supreme Court.

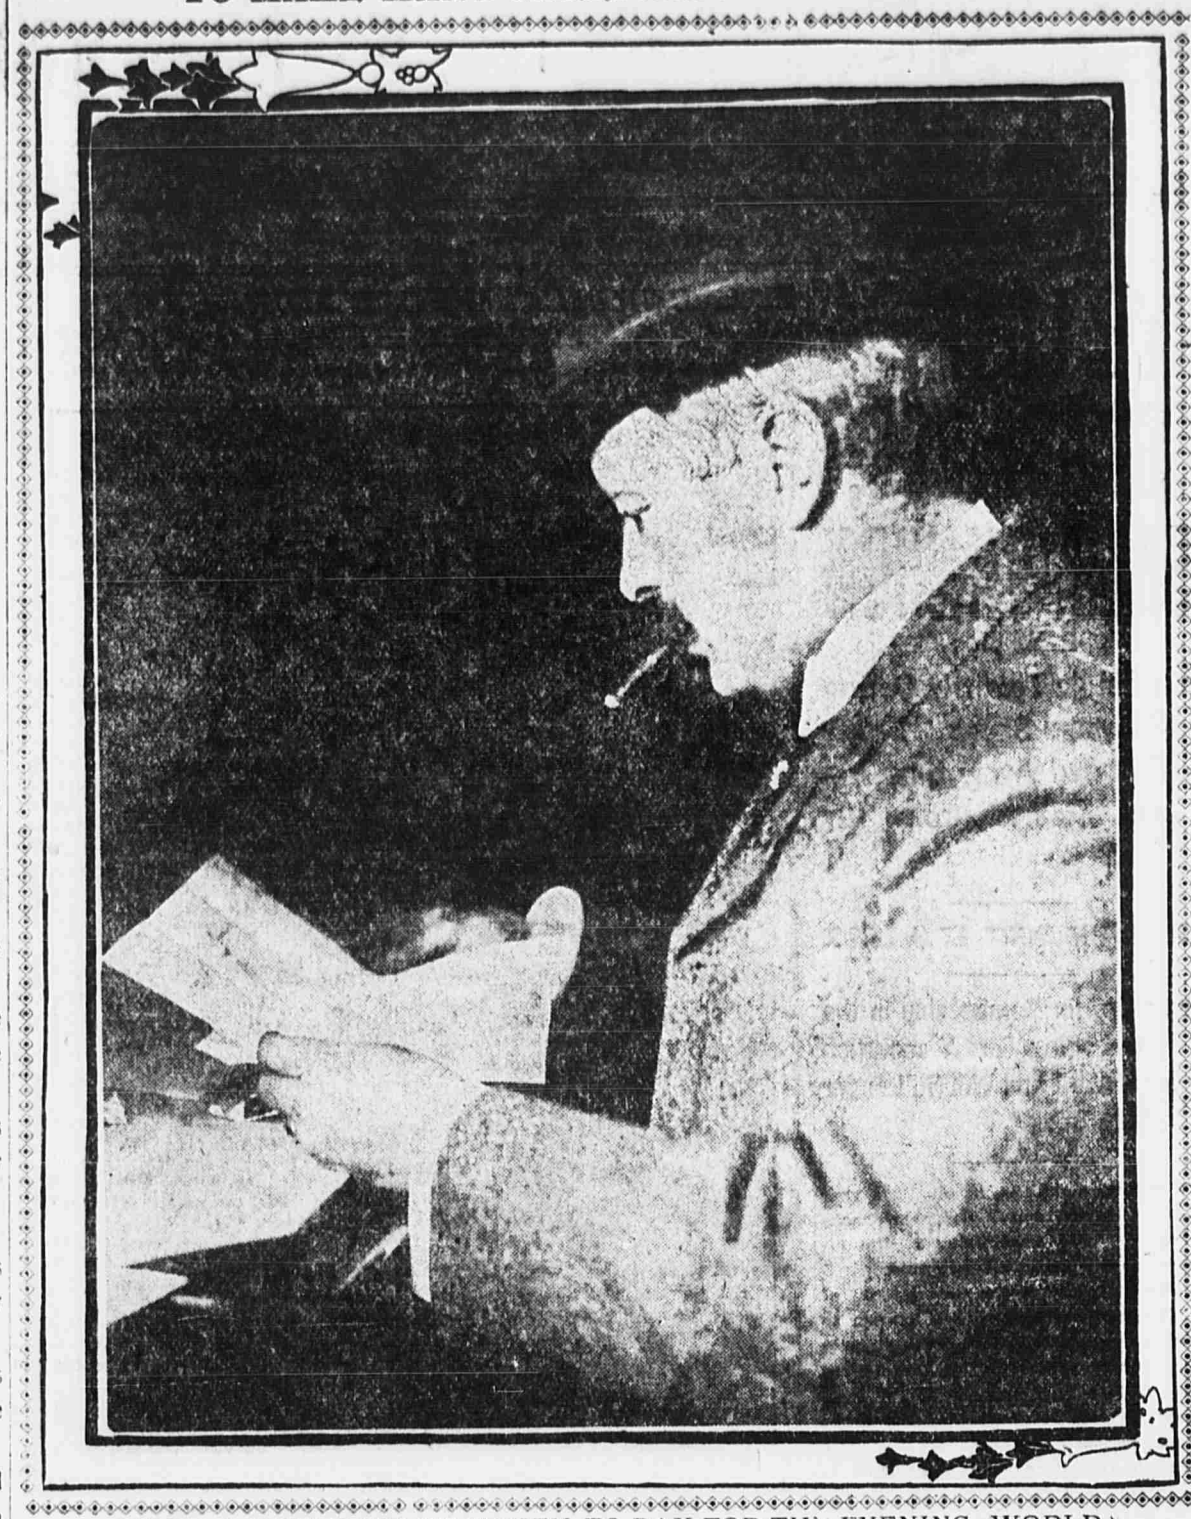

William O. Miles told the jury in opening the trial that the couple, yet in the early twenties, were married Jan. 7, 1926, that Mrs. Frank left her husband and took up residence with another man, and that she was followed to Philadelphia with an engaging stranger and to a boarding-house at No. 367 North Tenth street.

Mrs. Frank, a petite and flashing-eyed brunette, sat just behind A. H. Hummel, her champion, and coaxed him as the trial progressed.

She says she visited her married sister in the City of Brotherly Love.

Richard D. Martin, of No. 121 New Jersey avenue, Brooklyn, testified that he was asked by Mr. Frank to follow Mrs. Frank, and on June 14, 1929, did follow her by train to Philadelphia. He called on Mrs. Frank and said: "I came down stairs clad in a single clinging garment of very thin silk. He was still there when Mr. Frank came from New York in answer to his despatch of the night before. When Mr. Frank saw her husband, the witness said, she burst into tears, threw her arms about his neck and begged him to forgive her."

years. At the opening hour to-day everything favored Price. The market opened firm, but before half an hour had elapsed it went off 9 points from the highest quotation scored yesterday. Sully was nervous but not dismayed and began to lay plans to establish a new record for March cotton.

While Wall street rings with the name of Sully in wonder and criticism the South rings with the name in admiration.

All through the cotton belt thousands of planters are watching the fight between the Titans of the market with intense interest. Every move upward means money for them. Thousands and hundreds of thousands of bales stored away in the back plantations are counting money for their owners. The South wants Sully to hang on and send the price higher and higher. All the planters are worrying about is how soon to let go.

Mr. Price's View.

Mr. Price gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"It is becoming evident that those who so confidently predict a further advance in cotton are likely for the immediate future to be without the support of the foreign market."

"In Liverpool at the close to-day's quotations for the active options are slightly lower than yesterday, although a sharp advance was logically due to follow the improvement shown by the New York market of Monday. Spot sales in Liverpool are only 8,000 bales. During the morning simultaneous quotations in New York of 20.20 for March and of 2.25 for March-April in Liverpool were recorded."

"This means that the New York market is relatively much higher than Liverpool. The failure to pass the Aldrich bill has resulted in serious declines in the New York stock market, and serious stringency in the money market within the next few weeks seems almost unavoidable with bank reserves at their present low point. The dry-goods market is becoming daily less active. Print clothes are quoted at 3.14, which is the same price at which they were selling last year at this time, and a month ago. At both periods cotton was a cent a pound lower."

"A prominent commission house in St. Louis telegraphs me as follows: "Paris, Texas, says from 8 to 10 per cent. of cotton remaining in fields. And will be gathered. Pine Bluff, Ark., says 10 per cent. bottom lands yet to pick. Weather improving."

"It is my belief that the March movement of cotton will be the largest on record and under such conditions I can see no justification for buying cotton at the moment."

WEARY OF CRIME, HE CONFESSES

Old-Time Burglar Hunts the Police, Who Are Wont to Hunt His Kind, and Surrenders Himself.

MANY YEARS A CONVICT.

After a criminal career extending over twenty years, during which he served many terms of imprisonment, Edward Wilson, forty years old, was stricken suddenly with remorse to-day and gave himself up to the Jersey City police for a crime he had committed in Chester, Pa., though no suspicion rested on him.

Wilson, who is a fine-looking man, first called at the Jersey City head-quarters and asked for Detective Larkin. He was sent to the Fifth Precinct station, where he met the detective. There he confessed his crime and told a story of a remarkable criminal career.

"On Jan. 21," Wilson said, "I robbed a jewelry store in Chester, Pa. I went to jail and served my time. I have decided to lead an honest life and feel that the only consistent beginning will be first to expiate my last crime."

"I know what imprisonment means, for I have served many terms. Even though one suspects me of having committed this crime, I would rather suffer the torments of imprisonment and start out knowing that I have cleaned off the slate."

"In 1882 I robbed a jewelry store in Philadelphia and got a year. A few weeks before I got out I robbed another jewelry store and got two years. In 1900 I attempted to commit a burglary in Newark and was sent to Trenton for two years. I went out the latter part of last July."

"While in the New Jersey prison I met a lot of interesting crooks, among them the Cogan boys, who, as the gentlemen burglars, terrorized this section of the State for many weeks. I also met Jack Shepard, the dude burglar, who eluded the police for many years before he was finally caught attempting to rob a shoe store in this city."

"These men told me that if I ever wanted to have any dealings with the police to go to Detective Larkin, as he was on the square and would keep his word even to a crook. That is the reason I have come to you. On the level, Larkin, I am going to lead an honest life after I do this deed."

Wilson was arraigned before Judge Murphy in the Second Criminal Court and committed to the county jail.

HARLEM RIVER FLOODS SUBWAY

Coffer Dam Five Hundred Feet Long Suddenly Fills with Water and Fourteen Men Flee for Their Lives.

2,000,000 GALLONS POUR IN.

The work on the Harlem tunnel section of the subway was delayed a month to-day and the lives of fourteen men were endangered by the breaking of a coffer dam extending out into the river from the foot of One Hundred and Forty-fourth street, 500 feet. It had taken two weeks to pump the dam out, and when the break occurred to-day 2,000,000 gallons of water were let in with a rush that almost overwhelmed the fourteen men who were working on the river bottom.

The work of building the Harlem River tunnel was found to be one of the most complex problems involved in the construction of the subway. It was found after several experiments that the construction of the river bottom would not permit of tunneling, and work was begun to erect a series of wooden coffer dams across the river in which excavations could be made the same as on land.

The Lenox avenue ditch was dug to the river bank, where a wall of rock was left to keep out the river water. On the other side of this wall a great oblong box of huge timbers was sunk to the river bottom.

The coffer dam, or coffer dam, is five hundred feet long and forty feet wide. It was made water tight with the purpose in view of pumping out the water and then beginning excavations under the river bed. When that section was completed it was intended to build a series of coffer boxes until the river was dried out.

Early to-day there were twelve laborers and two engineers working in the bottom of this box when all of a sudden the midstream end gave way and water poured in. The men rushed to the ladders and twelve of the fourteen succeeded in escaping the water. Two of the men were caught in the flood, but were pulled out safely.

The contracting firm of McMillan & McLean have charge of this section of the tunnel. Mr. McLean said to-day that the break in the big dam would delay the tunnel at least a month, as it would take nearly two weeks to pump out the 2,000,000 gallons let in by the break, even though their pumps could draw out 500 gallons a minute. He said that this break would also mean a considerable financial loss to them.

SENATORS ANGRY WITH ROOSEVELT

President Sends Notice to Them that He Wants Naval Bill as Framed in the House to Go Through.

SENATE HAD CHANGED IT.

(Special to The Evening World.)

WASHINGTON, March 3.—President Roosevelt sent Secretary Moody to the Capitol to-day as a personal messenger to insist that the House conference on the Naval bill shall not recede from their position on the battle-ship programme for the next year.

The House bill provided for three great battle-ships and the Senate had changed the bill to four battle-ships of a lighter type.

Secretary Moody told Chairman Foss, of the House Naval Committee, that the President insisted that the House programme should be followed. Moody said that the Department wanted the ships provided for by the House bill and that if the Naval bill failed because of this feature of the bill the President would cheerfully call an extra session of Congress.

There is much indignation in the Senate over this attempt of the President to dictate legislation. Senator Hale, Chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, was ill this morning, but there was a conference on the bill this afternoon.

He has determined not to yield to the House.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

MISS GLEASON WILL APPEAR.

So Says Dr. Fitch, Who Has Applied for an Administrator for Late Mayor's Estate.

Dr. Neil O. Fitch, who has applied to have an administrator appointed for the estate of the late Patrick J. Gleason, of Long Island City, made the positive statement to-day that Miss Jessie Gleason, who has been reported strangely missing since the application was made, will appear before the Surrogate on March 20 and ask that her aunt, Miss Garrity, and James Kennedy be appointed administrators.

Dr. Fitch, who instituted the Surrogate Court proceedings in order that he might have the bill owed to him by Gleason paid, said that when the ex-Mayor was on his deathbed he said to him the physician, paid before all other debts. Dr. Fitch said that he believed the dead man had many valuable securities which he disposed of by will. He denied making any statement to the effect that there was any such sum as $200,000 withheld from the estate.

In an interview to-day Dr. Francis Burke, brother of former Corporation Counsel Thomas F. Burke, who was Mr. Gleason's legal adviser, said: "Pat Gleason left a will. You may say that from me, and the will is now in the keeping of Thomas F. Magner, at No. 29 Court street, Brooklyn."

"What the will contains, of course, I do not know, beyond that it disposes of certain holdings in the Woodside Water Company, in which Mr. Gleason was largely interested along with Big Jim Lennon. I do not know what they are worth."
